

Americans pick their presidents and vice presidents from the candidates presented by the Democratic and Republican parties. People do not vote directly for the president and vice president; instead, the Electoral College allows voters to vote for electors. These electors then cast votes a specific candidate, a system described in Article II of the Constitution.

The responsibility of voters has increased with the growth of our country and government. Even if you are not of voting age, now is the time to get familiar with the process and the importance of voting. Students are the future of this country, and your vote determines the fate of policies and tactics of leaders.

Follow along with this process in the presidential elections in 2020 and 2024.

Campaigning: General election campaigning begins after each political party chooses a single presidential nominee. Those candidates travel the country, holding rallies and town halls, explaining their views and trying to win potential voters' support.

Voting at the General Election: Every four years, citizens in every state cast their votes for one president and vice president. These voters select groups of electors to represent each state on behalf of the voters.

Electoral College System: In the Electoral College system, each state gets a certain number of electors based on its representation in Congress. A simple majority of the 538 (or 270 votes) is needed to win.

National Conventions: Both parties have delegates that will choose the nominees for president and vice president. They will also adopt a platform outlining the party's policy priorities and values.

Primary Elections: A state-level election where party members choose a candidate to represent that political party at the general/presidential election.

Caucuses: Citizens participate in local meetings where members gather votes for their preferred candidate, used to elect delegates to the national party convention.

Incumbent - Donald Trump - eligible for one more term.

Challengers- Many candidates participate in debates to gain party favor.
